

For more information, contact:
Sandy Skees
Communications4Good
831 332 4387
Sandy@Communications4Good.com

NextSpace Launches Largest Co Working Space for Entrepreneurs and Business Leaders

Entrepreneurial catalyst introduces a physical and virtual community that supports economic growth throughout Santa Cruz region

SANTA CRUZ, Calif., -- October 1, 2008. NextSpace Co Working + Innovation officially launched its company by opening the doors to a co working space with over 10,000 square feet of office, workstation and café facilities. Additional service offerings include NextSpace membership in a community of new economy companies and thought leaders, as well as business formation consulting and capital investment.

NextSpace is optimized for entrepreneurs, innovators, designers, developers, strategists, mentors and investors of early stage companies who see value in partnering or proximity to others in a professional and creative setting. Designed for business owners, freelancers and remote workers, NextSpace is offering the country's largest co working space to locals and commuters alike.

Santa Cruz Mayor Ryan Coonerty, former Economic Development Manager Jeremy Neuner, and attorney Caleb Baskin founded NextSpace in response to growing interest from early stage companies and business leaders.

According to Jeremy Neuner, president of NextSpace, " We are creating a community of innovators and providing them the tools they need to make their ideas fly. We catalyze local talent, local ideas, and local capital to create products, services, and solutions for the global marketplace."

Café, carrel and office memberships range from drop-in use of cafe space and WiFi, work station, or private offices -- each level including full co working benefits that include access to phone rooms, project rooms, conference space, and office services. Pricing ranges from $175 per month to $1500 for the corner office.

For more information about NextSpace, visit www.nextspace.us.

About NextSpace

NextSpace is an entrepreneurial catalyst for collaborative, growth-minded companies and individuals who create products, services and solutions for the global marketplace. Located in Santa Cruz, California, NextSpace is a physical and virtual community that gives members premiere office space and amenities, business networking with flourishing new economy companies, access to thought leaders, and business formation consulting and capital.